

Privacy Policy(Effective from January 10, 2024)

MagicPod diligently manages, uses, and shares users' personal information with utmost care. This policy outlines how MagicPod handles personal information.

1. Information Collection by MagicPod

Information stored on our servers by users of our products and services

Information retained on user' devices during usage of our products and services

This includes execution log details from running MagicPod tests. Other data will be stored on our servers only with user consent.

Inquiry details entered by users on our website

Information entered by users on our support website

Automatically received data

MagicPod may collect and store information about our products, services, homepage, support sites, and the usage of this information. This includes the following:

- IP address of the user's computer
- Sign-in information
- Computer and connection data (browser type/version, timezone, browser plugin type/version, operating system, platform, etc.)
- Records including date/time of complete Uniform Resource Locator (URL) for accessing our services
- Cookies
- Server response time, download errors, access time, session information during product/service/website/support site usage

Other information obtained through business activities or service provision

This includes information obtained via business cards, emails, and contract data.

2. Use of Collected Information

We utilize collected information for providing products and services. Moreover, we employ it for enhancing product features, improving quality, supporting activities, conducting business, and developing new products and services.

3. Ownership of Collected Information

Users retain ownership and copyright of information stored on our servers through product/service use. However, users agree to our use of this information within the scope of sections 2* and 4* of this policy.

4. Information Disclosure to Third Parties

We share collected information with entities other than MagicPod only under specific conditions:

- Entrusting the handling of personal information partially or entirely within the necessary scope for achieving the purpose of use
- With user consent
- In accordance with legal requirements
- In response to legal procedures or requests from enforceable administrative agencies
- As necessary within legal boundaries for protecting human life, body, or property
- When it is necessary to detect, stop, or take other actions against unauthorized activities or security issues

MagicPod may disclose or share aggregated information that does not identify individuals or organizations.

If MagicPod becomes subject to a merger, acquisition, or asset transfer, user-related information is typically considered as transferred business assets, subject to limitations outlined in the existing privacy policy commitments. However, this excludes cases in which user consent has been obtained.

5. Changes to this Policy

MagicPod's privacy policy may change as necessary. We will inform users of significant changes using designated methods.

6. Contact

For questions or concerns regarding this privacy statement, please contact us through the contact form on our website.

Last Updated: August 8th, 2023

